Resource Guide for Survivors of Crime

Updated—November 2nd, 2022

Overcoming any obstacle in life involves courage, strength, and persistence. SURVIVING a crime is not something that happens overnight. It is a lifetime journey that requires unwavering love, understanding, and support.

—Crime Survivors Resource Center

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This resource guide has been created to help inform survivors of crime about the various essential services available in Harris County. The various resources are broken down by crime type and the services provided by each organization so survivors can choose which organization may best suit their needs. Several organizations are listed more than once because they serve survivors of several types of crime—or because they have more than one location in Harris County. If there are additional resources you think we should include in future versions of this resource guide, please reach out to Veronyka James, Survivor of Crime Researcher and Specialist, Harris County Office of Justice and Safety \(OJS\) at Veronyka.James@jad.hctx.net or 832-927-6945.

TEXAS LAW AND THE RIGHTS OF SURVIVORS¹

Texas Law guarantees certain rights to crime survivors. To exercise your rights as a survivor of crime, it is necessary to contact victim-service providers to discuss your rights and available services. Law-enforcement agencies, the local district attorney's office, or supervising agencies (e.g., probation) typically have victim-service providers available to assist with these requests. You may also contact:

¹ Although both the terms “victim” and “survivor” are appropriate when discussing someone who has experienced a victimization and a crime, there are reasons to use one versus the other. “Victim” usually refers to someone who has recently experienced victimization and is commonly used when discussing crime and/or referencing the criminal-justice system or criminal-justice-system actors (e.g., victim services). The term “survivor” often refers to someone who is going through or has gone through the recovery process. Some individuals who have experienced victimization will identify as “victims” while others identify as “survivors.” Although the most respectful course of action is to ask the individual what term they would prefer, “survivor” generally connotes strength, empowerment, and resiliency. As such, in this guide, the term “survivor” is used primarily, except when discussing criminal-justice systems or services (e.g., Victim Compensation). In these instances, the term “victim” is used when it is the official name of a service or provider.

Several online resources go into more depth in explaining the use of the terms “victim” and “survivor”—as well as several other related terms. JAD finds the following particularly insightful. Common Justice, Beyond Offender and Victim: Toward a Humane, Event-Centered Language for Talking about People Involved in Crime and Violence, <https://www.vera.org/downloads/publications/common-justice-on-language.pdf>.
